

I just love this front cover. This pic is nearly at the end of an adventure that changed my life – I met Grumpy known from then on as my “African souvenir”. There are many layers here just like the Great African Safari itself.

This trip book has been a labour of love. Grumpy and I were invited to a 20th reunion of the BATFACES - couldn't go empty handed so we scoured the old albums, tuned up the scanner and raided my art stash.

Page 2 I have a hidden sheet which shows the truck layout, the date the overland commenced, the key symbolizes that I am wanting to share/open our memories with the reader, the giraffe is an ongoing recent joke that fits the theme and the Livingstone cartoon says it all really.

Page 3 Day 1 of the great African Safari, our Bedford truck that we later named “Nullus Secundus” Second to none. I listed all of the punters names, a few quips and one of our AM's African oval.

Page 4 found a great ephemera sheet and added a map which I coffee stained, added the encounter overland logo and some stickers.
